California Association of Private Postsecondary Schools Names Success Education Colleges 2014 School of the Year

Award Underscores the Colleges' Commitment to Quality Education

WEST COVINA, Calif.—Out of more than 200 member institutions, the California Association of Private Postsecondary Schools (CAPPS) recently recognized Success Education Colleges (SEC) as their 2014 School of the Year. The honor demonstrates SEC's continued dedication to raising the standard of excellence among postsecondary schools throughout the state.

"Out of hundreds of colleges in California, I'm extremely proud that CAPPS has awarded SEC the title of 2014 School of the Year," said Mitchell Fuerst, President of Success Education Colleges. "I'm also proud of each and every SEC team member for their daily contributions which make our organization outstanding."

Executive Director of CAPPS Robert Johnson explained that, in addition to its involvement in teach-outs for sector schools, SEC has also supported the Education Management Boot Camp, Career Services workshops, and other initiatives.

"Success Education Colleges has given a visible lift to the Association and the sector in the midst of a tough operating environment," Johnson said. "We look forward to our continued work with this fine organization in promoting and improving our great sector."

The Association will officially present the award to Success Education Colleges at the 30th Annual CAPPS Conference, held from October 15–17, 2014 in Monterey, California.
